Reasons for the Whisky Combination.

An arrangement for closer and permanent association between Mesers. James Buchanan and Co. and Messrs. John Dewir and Sons has been explained to a representative of "The Times" by directors of the two firms.

Mr. Harrison and Mr. Lundy, of Messre. Buchanan and Co., said that the two companies would maintain their separate 'existence and the separate boards of directors would remain as they were at present. There would, however, he a new joint board composed of memhers of both concerns, which would contol the general commercial policy of the two firms. The interests of the two-compinion, though in the past they have been competitive, were really identical all over the world. There would be no issue of capital to the public, and the amalgamation would involve no change in the whiskies sold by the separate firms. Sir Thomas Dewar said that one ob ject of the amulgamation was to meet the heavy taxation now in force and the increased cost of raw materials. A stoppage of serious competition would help he firms to bear the burdens which had been placed upon them. The character "if the separate businesses would remain as in the past and the employees would not be affected by the change. Both Mesers. Dewar's and Mesers. Buchanan and Co. were free-trade firms. They had no pecuniary interest in retail shops. The public were their customers. They gave the best value they could and adrertised the fact of that quality. They must continue to advertise.

While the Germans have called up for active service all reservists domiciled in Switzerland, many French territorials, after having been under arms since the beginning of the war, are returning to their Swiss homes.

Major David Coley Young, command ing the 1st Battalian War Gurkha Rifles was killed in action near Neuvo Chapello on March 12, while trying to save wounded British soldier. In 1889 he joined the Durham Light Infantry, and CIEN TING went to the Gurkha Rifles in February, 1802. He served with the latter regiment in North Chine in 1900 with the Espeditionary Force, for which he gained the medal. He held the appointment of A.D.C. and D.A.A.G. on the Staff of General Sir O'Moore Creagh in North Ohina in 1901 and 1902/

WAR AND INDUSTRY.

The main problem confronting the comminductry is how it can recover the financial position which it held in July Lote. The task will be far from large as it has been hit tremendously inud, probably liagion than any other industry in the aviotry, says a special unrespondent in "The Daily Telegraph."

Proof of this assertion is available, and 816 is not difficult to understand. Manchester, the centre of the trade, is not, as is often supposed, a city of cotton mills, but is, first und foremost, a huge market for cotton goods, containing innumerable warehouses. To this market the spinhere and manufacturers of the towns and kalillages for miles and miles around send the preducts of their spindles and their loans. There they buy and sell. COUNCIL "IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY."

SONG THAT BECAME A CLASSIC.

No more striking instance of how a song has brought sudden fame to an author H. E. the General Officer Commanding could possibly be found than in the case of Mr. Harry Williams, a Birmingham man, now residing in Meer End, Kenil-"Colonial Secretary, Hon. Mr. CLAUD worth. "It's a long, long way to lipper ary" was written some years ago, and was Attorney General. Hon. Mr. J. H. | a big success the first time it was produced. The author has now gained a world-wide reputation, and many million copies of the song have been sold in England and merica aloce the linem set in. "Tipperary" has become "The Marching Anthem on the Bittlefield of Europe." Thousands of "Capt. Supt. of Police; Hon. Mr. C. men are singing the chorus as they travel to our great seaports, where the hig frame ports are waiting to convey them to the ant of war. When they land in Pelgium and France the awinging chosus of "Tip- Buzzard (Mr. Hill) 2 perary "sends the inhabitants fractic with Mr. Shanghai's Husser, (Mr. Brand) 3 delight, and the soldiers of the French and Belgian armies have picked up the words and are using "Tipperary" as a battle song to cheer them on the march. It is heard on the streets of Parls as well as in London, and men who have returned to one hospital wards are heard humming it from morning to night, and wishing they were adia to de deck-with their comrades who are singing the chorus as they face the German foe.

. "GETTING MORT THERE."

No matter where he may be or what he may be doing, Tommy Atkins must have his chorus to sing at odd moments of the day or night-whosever the spirit moves him to song. It is no small thing to have written a song that can cheer men on to battle. The making of the songs of the people is a wonderful business. Mr Robert Blatchford avers that such things are "made in heaven." The writer of a popular song with the "punch" that endears them to the multitude are born-not made. Where the high-class poets and melodist signally fail to make one's pulse beat the quicker through their work, the bards of the once despised music "It's a long, long way to Tipperary!" Where Kipling and Hardy may fail to stir the heart of Tommy Atkins with their cultured and scholarly yerse, Harry Williams has succeeded with "Tipperary." Rhythmical In tial fire (half-quenched by language not understood by the average Tommy), these make no impression on the boys of the rank and file. They do not want their deeds of valour hymned in rolling hexameters. Give them a song of the little home in far off Tipperary, tell of the sweet colleen who is waiting to welcome them back from the war, and, in the words of the song, "Their hearts are right there." EFFECT OF THE CHORUS.

The tune should combine something of the sweetness of the old songs with modern originality, and the words should have just that touch of sympathy, which, though it is so hard to describe, we all know so well. It is pleasant and interesting to notice the offect of such a chorus on the troops. Men may be trudging along n the hot sun, with that "do or die" gait that shows only too plainly the strain is beginning to tell. Then some irrepressible man will start humming one or two-others, until at last everyone has The Colonial Secretary having second. has joined in, and the column is avinging along as gaily as ever it did. Let us hope that it will not be long before our fellows, sing it marching through the streets of

The "Daily Mirror" says: -One little incident at the patriolic concert at the Albert Hall rooms to have escaped mention. King George joined heartily in the chorus of " It's a long, long

It is not only heard on every hand, but no newspaper can be perused which at some time or the other does not contain some allusion to it. Leading articles in our leading newspapers are written with "t's a long, long way to Tipperary " as the text. Never has a popular melody so completely captured everybody without distinction of rank or profession. The unique position "Tipperary occupies in the hearts of the British people throughout the world, characterises it as the song of the contary which will go down in history. The memorable part it played at the Albert Hall Royal Performance, and the remarkable tribute Dr. Ethel Smythe, the wellknown music an, paid this soul-stirring song in the "Observer," are two landmarks in its eventful history which stand out conspicuously. The uses to which "Tipperary" is being put, and the incidents in which it figures, are legion. British troops sing it on the battlehelds, in the trenches. and on the march. Recruits stimulate their ardour with it in camps and at their sing-songs. It everes as a password for our Tummies at the front. Our dads in blue, swimming for their lives, clinging

The German attacking troops had specially designed respirators. This all points to a long methodical preparation on a large scale. He emphasises that a week before Germany used this method, a Berlin communique announced that the British were using asphysiating gases. Then there appeared no reason for this astounding falsehood, but it is obvious that it was part of a scheme. It shows that the Germans recognised the illegality of the method and were anxious to forestall neutral and domestic criticism. Moreover, since the method was first used, the enemy adopted it both in offence and

" The effect was not merely disabling or even painlessly fatal as suggosted in the German Press, but the victims suffered acutely and a large proportion died a painful and lingering death. It appears that those surviving are permanently injured in the lungs and may possibly be invalids for life. These effects must have been known to German scientists, who devised the method and the military authorities who sanctioned there use. I am of opinion that the enemy definitely decided to use these gases as a normal procedure and protests will therefore be

In the House of Commons Mr. Lloyd George, in his Budget speech, said that tarntion would be unchanged. The time was inconvenient to review the financial position, which depended on events in the next two or three months. The result of the war was never in doubt, but then they would be able to give a dependable opinion as to its duration. He said that eight months of war had cost £307,000,000. The estimated revenue for the coming year was £270,000,000, an increase of £43,000,000. He pointed out that if the war ended in September the total expenditure would amount to £786,000,000. which the Army expenditure would be £400,000,000, the Navy £100,000,000, and advances to the Allies and Dominions £100,000,000. If the war lasted another year the total expenditure would be £1,136,000,000, and there would be a net deficit of £862,000,000.

The large attendance of spectators, which has stimulated the new movement, and a exhibited keen interest in the play.

In comparison with previous years, the in the present condict. final was undoubtedly slow and not nearly so productive of stylish play. It was how-ever exciting enough. Ng played a remarkable lobbing game and returned Green's powerful drives with comparative case but his returns lacked strength and Green was generally successful in smashing. He played a spoiling game which at the same time was most stronuous and exacting. He found Ny fairly safe on the left base and fourth Ng strenthened his right defence. With his own service he too's the score to forward drive which won him his first game. Loudly cheered he came again into prominence with steady play and, aided by a double fault from Green, looked like still further reducing Green's advantage. There was a serious tustle for the deuce and a still more vigorous encounter for the advantage and winning stroke. Ng. playing with splendid judgment, returned Green's forward drives and secured both points, Green letting himself down with a drive into the net. The remaining games in the set were handsomely won by Green, who, generally, had Ng completely at his mercy. Ng showed signs of weakening in returns and his net play was unreliable. Ng won the opening game in the second set, but Green's clover plucing soon drew him level. Green forced the play, showing superior form driving in a succession of points. Once Green just tipped the ball over, when Ng was beyond the base line. The point certainly looked Green's. but Mg sprinted and hooking his racquet beneath the ball, scoring to a point to the great susprise of everyone. His effort was deservedly acknowledged. However, he failed to overcome Green's strong offensive and lost the second sot

Winning the first game in the third set, Ng improved wonderfully, Against this Green was falling off, and played with much less vigour. He drew level and Ng came along rattling in point after point until he was two games shead. He was having everything his own way owing to Green's slackening, yet he had to win his point well. He showed a well-grounded knowledge of the same but his judgment in placing was orraric. He returned the most impossible shots and lobbed to advantage. The contestants were level again at 4-4 and Ng won the next two games, giving
